

BODY OF ATTORNEY NOW LIES IN STATE

John C. Fay, Who Died in His Office Six Days Ago, to Be Buried Tomorrow.

The body of John C. Fay, famous Court of Claims lawyer and prominent in American legal circles, found in his third-floor office in the Corcoran building yesterday, six days after he died, lies in state at the Gawler undertaking establishment today preparatory to the funeral services which will be held there tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

By virtue of his military service while a New Jersey cavalryman in the civil war, Mr. Fay's body will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

One of the most dramatic features of the discovery of the jurist's body was the fact that Mrs. Julia Fletcher, who figured in a sensational divorce case here, was the woman client who went to the closed door of Mr. Fay's office and looking through the mail slot in the door, saw the body propped in a chair, in the same position it had held since an attack of heart trouble ended Mr. Fay's life as he sat alone at his window.

Wife and Son Return.
Mrs. Fay and her son, Julius, who were at Asbury Park, N. J., were telegraphed last night and reached Washington soon after midnight. They went to their apartments in the Falkstone court, at Fourteenth and Fairmont streets, where they left word that they would be at the residence of a niece at the Olympia apartments, at Fourteenth and Euclid streets, according to information given out at the Falkstone this morning.

At the Olympia, however, Mrs. Fay and her son were not known and it was eventually learned that Mrs. Fay and Julius Fay had been taken to the residence of her nephew, N. Worthington Dorsey, of 1321 Thirty-first street northwest.

Charles W. Arth, the attorney who has offices adjacent to Judge Fay's, and who has known the lawyer for years, held a conference with Julius Fay and N. Worthington Dorsey at Mr. Arth's offices this morning and it was decided to hold the funeral services tomorrow.

In Chair a Week.
It is regarded as extraordinary that Judge Fay's body remained in an upright position in his chair for nearly a week, without the suspicions of neighboring officeholders being aroused. When found, the body was in such a position that a man passing by on the street might have seen the figure without the slightest suspicion that he was dead.

Charles W. Arth said today that he had made inquiries for Judge Fay for had said that the attorney was at the Jersey seashore with his wife and son. L. Edward Donaldson, manager of the Falkstone Apartments, at Fourteenth and Fairmont streets, said that the balance of Judge Fay from his apartment had been noticed but that it was believed he had left the city. Prior to his death, the lawyer had occupied the family apartment with his wife and son and went away in the early part of the summer, first to Rahway, N. J., and later to Asbury Park.

Famed As Lawyer.
Later, as a lawyer, he reached extraordinary prominence as a practicing attorney before the United States Court of Claims and the United States Supreme Court. He represented many big interests before both courts, such as the Cramps Shipbuilding Company, the Western Union Telegraph Company, railroads, and other big corporations. In addition to his wife, Eva M. Fay, and his son, Julius A. Fay, who is a student at Cornell, Mr. Fay is survived by a married daughter, Mrs. George A. Brakley, of New York city. He was a member of Ulrich Dahlgren Post, G. A. R., of Elizabeth, N. J., but was affiliated with no church or other fraternal organization.

The burial at Arlington will be private. Coroner Nevitt declared death was due to heart disease, and said the body had been by the window for several days.

Fay's family was absent in Atlantic City on a vacation. His disappearance from his apartment in the Falkstone Court six days ago, his absence from his usual haunts, even the locked door of his office caused no comment. Not until the woman client asked the elevator man of Fay's whereabouts did any one appear to note that the "judge" had been away from his apartment for about a week and not seen at his office in that time.

Offices on both sides of the Fay office were vacant, but many clients went to his place in the week, turned away at finding the door locked. Fay was one of the most noted practitioners before the United States Court of Claims, and was accounted wealthy. He served in the civil war, then came to Washington, and with Senator Joe McDonald, of Indiana, and Col. Richard J. Bright established a law concern. At various times in his career he served such vast interests as the Cramp Shipbuilding Company and several large railroads.

Fay was a picturesque character. He was only 5 feet 6 inches tall, but weighed 200 pounds. He wore a long gray mustache and goatee and was always seen downtown in a flat-topped derby.

The body was turned over to an undertaking establishment awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Fay and her son from Atlantic City.

SULZER IS GAGGED BY HIS ATTORNEYS

Lawyers, Planning Coup, Fear That Accused Official Will "Give Away" Scheme.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—"Thank God the bosses are hearing from the people!" That was the only comment obtainable today from William Sulzer, impeached governor of the State of New York. On the eve of his formal arraignment before the high court, which will determine whether he is to continue to discharge the duties of the high office to which he was elected by the people of the state last November, Sulzer seemed outwardly confident.

He wanted to talk when he greeted the correspondents, but his attorneys, fearful that he might disclose something which would afford "aid and comfort" to the enemy, have absolutely gagged him. He has been directed to let them do the talking and, convinced that this is the wise policy, he has obeyed their order. Sulzer remained in his working office until long after daylight today, consulting the returns from yesterday's primaries.

The high court of impeachment meets tomorrow. With the exception of the impeachment trial of Andrew Johnson, Chief Executive of the nation, this will be the first real "recall" trial of an executive which has attracted the attention of the entire world. On two persons, a woman and a man, Sulzer's fate seems to depend. The woman is his wife, who has been pronounced a factor in his announced public defiance of boss rule. She, Sulzer's friends say, is responsible for his difficulty. It is claimed that the stock speculative accounts on which much of the present impeachment proceedings are predicated, were sponsored by Mrs. Sulzer.

It is stated with considerable emphasis that Mrs. Sulzer will tell her own story in her own way before the bar of the impeachment court.

The man who stands out as the great figure in the case is Edgar M. Cullen, chief judge of the court of appeals. It is admitted to be a fearless jurist. He retires from the office he now holds December 31, next. Independent of political leaders, defiant as always of the conventionalities, the opinion of this veteran jurist will have a powerful influence on the court. It has been decided that, following precedent, the judges of the court of appeals will vote on all questions before the members of the senate.

Although the names will be arranged alphabetically, Judge Cullen, who by virtue of his office will preside over the trial, will vote second. It seemed certain today that his judicial opinion would have great weight.

nets, Charles H. Williams, colored, ran into the Sixth precinct police station, in New Jersey avenue, this morning and asked the officer to protect him. He was sent to the observation ward of the Washington Asylum.
